

AIDN Lunch Briefing with Air Vice-Marshal John Harvey, AM Program Manager New Air Combat Capability The F35 Program

Air Vice-Marshal John Harvey joined the RAAF in 1977 after completing a degree in Architecture at the University of New South Wales. After a three year flying tour in the USA on F-111s he completed the RAF Aero systems course and returned to Australia for a three year posting in Technical Intelligence at the Joint Intelligence Organisation. He was then posted to the United States as Flight Test Director of the F-111 Avionics Update Project, initially working with the USAF on the F-111 AMP. On return from Italy he was Deputy Director at the Australian Defence College and then Director of Military Strategy at Australian Defence Headquarters before being promoted and posted as Director General Aerospace Development. On 2nd September 2002 he was posted as Director General New Air Combat Capability.

Air Vice-Marshal Harvey was promoted in November 2006 to become the Program Manager of the New Air Combat Capability within the Defence Materiel Organisation. In 2008, Air Vice-Marshal Harvey was made a Member in the Military Division of the Order of Australia for his service as Program Manager and has been identified for promotion and appointment to Chief Capability Development Group with effect October 2010.
